

SHERGARH TENTED CAMP

Kanha Tiger Reserve, India

Set amongst woodland surrounding a large waterhole at the centre of its grounds, Shergarh is a new camp providing tented accommodation, traditional home-cooked food and personalised wildlife activities, in a warm, relaxed environment.

Shergarh Tented Camp is located four kilometres from the Mukki (southern) entrance to Kanha Tiger Reserve.

Shergarh accommodates up to 12 guests in six cosy tents, each with its own bathroom and verandah. They have been individually placed to give privacy from one another.

Meals are served in the dining area, a homely room that provides the ideal setting for swapping stories around an open fire, or place to relax quietly with a book. Deep lazy verandahs surround the building and overlook the large waterhole which attracts an array of bird life.

As a small camp, we are entirely flexible to attend to all of our guests' needs and specific areas of interest such as bird watching, photography, film making and research projects. We are well tuned to wildlife enthusiasts and visitors incorporating a safari experience within their cultural exploration of India.

Kanha Tiger Reserve attracts thousands of visitors each year to see the diverse range of wildlife amongst 940 sq km of sal and bamboo forests, meandering riverines, vast meadows and high plateaus.

Mammals include wild dog and jungle cat, the elusive leopard, bison, jackal, 4 species of deer, 3 species of antelope and the rarely sighted, nocturnal sloth bear.

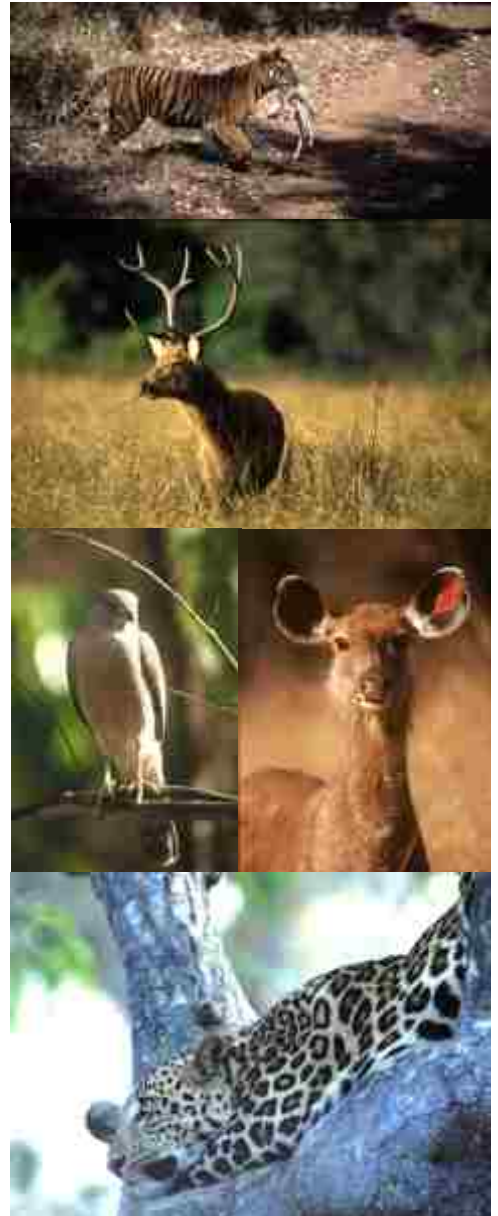

Amongst the deer species are the hard-ground adapted Barasingha found only at Kanha. Once endangered, a highly successful conservation programme has brought numbers back into hundreds, and many are found in the Mukki range, south of the Reserve.

Waterholes and high plateaus such as Bahmni Dadar are excellent spots to watch birds, of which there are some 220 species, and make for quiet locations to stop and immerse in the natural peace of the jungle.

At Shergarh, we accompany game drives inside the core area. During the morning session, three elephant ranges are tracking for tiger. If they are successful, guests may have the opportunity to view tiger from elephant back. Back home, guests can request slide shows for a concise and informative documentation of Kanha's wildlife.

In addition to park activities, guests may participate in early morning bird walks to experience Kanha by foot, or cycle rides through the forest to swim in the Banjar River.

Every week local tribal villages burst into bustling, colourful markets. Guests can experience traditional rural trading, enjoying a riverside picnic en-route.
